U. S. MOVES TO BAR TRADING IN SUGAR FUTURES

Injunction Proceedings Started
by Federal Government in New York City
Thursday

DAUGHERTY ASKS ACTION AS RESULT OF "SPECULATIVE ORGY"

Conspiracy in Restraint of Trade
(Charged in Government Action)

WASHINGTON.—By The Associated Press. Injunction proceedings to completely shut off trading in sugar futures and to bar all ownership or control of sugar were instituted in New York Thursday by the federal government.

The government's bill, prepared under the personal direction of Attorney General Daugherty after consultation with President Harding, asks the court permanently to prevent the New York Coffee and Sugar exchange from entering into or permitting any transactions in sugar futures contracts, or permitting any person to make such sale in his possession or under his control a supply of sugar adequate to meet the requirements of such transactions.

Charge Conspiracy

The action is requested, the government says, as a result of "an orgy of speculation" which has driven up the price of sugar to the consumer and which during February enhanced the pocketbooks of brokers by $200,000. A conspiracy in restraint of trade and commerce is charged and officials of the exchange and of the New York Coffee and Sugar clearing house association, against which the injunction would be directed, jointly with the exchange are asked to answer in court and answer the government's allegations.

The court was asked in the bill that the exchange and the clearing house association serve no legitimate purpose in the marketing of sugar to consumers and foreign commerce and that the exchange and clearing house are a means of concentrating and manipulating the market. It was asked that the exchange be dissolved and that the clearing house be dissolved and that the market be opened to all.

Proceeding is Drastic

The proceedings are the most sweeping ever instituted by the federal government in its efforts to curb speculation in the necessities of life. The injunction petition was filed in the federal court at New York, and a copy was filed in the department of justice by the department of justice.

THREE MEN BATTLE ICE AND GALES TO BRING RELIEF TO STARVING COLONY ON ISLAND

NORTHPORT, Mich.—By The Associated Press.—Cold, exhausted and half starved, three men who for 48 hours battered their way through slush ice and open water, reached the mainland here Wednesday bearing news that ten others—nine men and a woman—are slowly starving on Fox Island, eighteen miles from here in Lake Michigan.

As a result of their story—a story of a battle against great odds in which lives were constantly at the mercy of sweeping gales and shifting ice packs—two army airplanes are on their way from Selfridge field, Mount Clemens, to carry food to the marooned party on Fox Island.

The party went to the island last fall to cut timber, carrying provisions sufficient for several months. The prolonged winter, however, did not enter into their calculations. Three weeks ago all food supplies excepting some frozen potatoes were gone.

With death from starvation facing the little colony, an attempt was made by four men to cross to the mainland. They started on foot but two miles from the island the ice broke up and two of the men narrowly escaped drowning before the return to the island was accomplished.

A week later the men started again, but when two miles out they were caught in a blinding snow storm. They wandered about uncertain of their direction for nearly a day before finding their way back to the island.

Third Attempt Successful

Last Monday morning a third start was made. Edward Harn, 24, Carl Cooper, 35, and Ellis Sayer, 21, were the men who composed the party which left the island in a stoutly built skiff, eight feet long. They carried one pair of oars, an eight-foot pole and an axe.

They had no food. Nearly starved they took turns at the oars. There was open water for about five miles. Horn, seated in a physician's office here told the story as Dr. E. E. Flood treated his frozen feet.

"When we ran into slush ice it took all one man's strength to push the boat a few feet. The ice became thicker and we tried to lift the boat on it and draw it along, but the ice broke under our feet.

"We determined to turn back to the island but a stiff wind blew in big floes and we couldn't turn back. We kept pushing the boat through ice all Monday night.

"Tuesday morning we found a stretch of open water and were able to row about two hours until we came to solid ice. We abandoned the boat and started on foot. We had gone only half a mile when we struck open water again and we went back and dragged the boat across the ice. After we put the boat in the water we found it leaked badly, and bail as hard as we could, it would not stay afloat. It sank as we jumped upon a large ice floe at two o'clock Tuesday afternoon about eight miles from any mainland.

"We used the axe to chop a large piece of the ice when we found open water at its other end. Then using the pole we started to paddle, using the cake of ice as our raft.

Fate Into Water

About five o'clock we started to walk to land on solid ice but a stiff wind started to break it up. At eight o'clock completely exhausted, we laid down in our blankets and slept until three o'clock Wednesday morning.

"The wind was blowing the ice in shore. We started walking and jumping across short stretches of ice. Cooper fell into the water twice and it required all of our strength to get him back on the ice. We made our jump to the mainland at 8:30 o'clock Wednesday morning.

The army planes are expected here Thursday afternoon. Food supplies and medicine will be ready to be taken to those on the island.

FARMERS' MEETING AT WEST SALEM ON TUESDAY A SUCCESS

Hundreds Throng to Stock Sales Pavilion to Hear John M. Kelley Speak on Advertising

SCORES DAIRYMEN FOR THEIR LACK OF MERCHANDISING PLAN

Advertising and Merchandising Will Better Conditions, He Says

ADVERTISING dairy products, thereby creating a demand for them, is the dairyman's only way to financial success, said John M. Kelley, lawyer, advertising expert and Holstein cattle breeder, in an address at West Salem Tuesday afternoon.

The meeting Tuesday, held in the West Salem stock sales pavilion, was one of the largest and most representative meetings of the kind ever held in this country. Businessmen, farmers, bankers, school children—hundreds of them—flocked into the pavilion and filled the seats to overflowing, listening intently during the two hours and a half of advice and explanation offered by Mr. Kelley.

Greatest Industries

Mr. Kelley said, in effect: "Dairying and agriculture are the greatest industries in the country today, and the poorest paying. A farmer will stick to his land and a dairyman to his cows as long as he has a shirt on his back and a sufficient income to assure him of the bare necessities of life. He does this because he has been filled with a sort of propaganda from many sources, most of them well meaning, which says that it is inevitable that conditions should be so with the agriculturist. No other class of people in the world would stick to a business which didn't pay any more net profits than does dairying and agriculture.

"The trouble is that nothing has ever been done to improve this greatest of all industries, except from the standpoint of production. Farmers are told how to increase their production and they do increase it. The result is that the producers put forth a great amount of their pocket, without any sort of an organized system of merchandising. Fluctuating prices of all proportion to the varying demand, naturally follow.

Value of Co-operation

"Another trouble with the dairymen and farmers of Wisconsin is that they do not fully appreciate the value of co-operation. They are not always agreed among themselves, and this also leads to difficulties. Nothing much can be done to better conditions until they do get together.

"There has been, as yet, no attempt made to put a standardized Wisconsin dairy product on the market, properly marked and labeled as coming from the Badger state. We are the greatest dairying state in the union, but we are about the only ones who know it. There never will come a time when the vast output of Wisconsin dairy products will be consumed within the boundaries of the state. We must search for and develop outside markets.

"For outside marketing, Europe is practically lost to butter. Statistics show that butter substitutes have been more generally used in Europe in recent years than has real butter, and the advertisers of the butter substitutes, by skillful advertising schemes, have brought this condition about. These people can sell a substitute for real butter, but the butter producers of the country have not been able to sell their output.

Need Advertising

"There is some hope for the dairyman, however. It lies in advertising. There is nothing that cannot be done if it is advertised properly, and the time has come for Wisconsin dairy interests to advertise, and to advertise extensively. This, coupled with an orderly plan of merchandising, will put the farmer and dairyman in his proper place, financially, in accordance with the amount of his investment.

J. M. Smith of Shell Lake, president of the Wisconsin Dairymen's association, spoke briefly on the benefits of the proposed plan of merchandising and advertising, giving as examples the work which had been done by the dairymen of the Shell Lake district. He made an appeal for all farmers and dairymen present at the meeting to apply for membership in Wisconsin Dairymen, Inc.

QUARREL ENDS IN FATALITY IN ROAD HOUSE

He Came Home Drunk and Threatened Her Life is Story Told by Wife After the Shooting

SHE CLAIMS THAT REVOLVER
DISCHARGED ACCIDENTALLY

Former Pugilist is Shot While He Lays on Bed After Long Argument

JACK DALEY, keeper of Cliffwood Inn, a road house just outside of the city limits on State road, was fatally shot by his wife while he lay on a bed in their living quarters at the inn about 9:10 Wednesday night. Daley was rushed to the St. Francis hospital, where he died from loss of blood at 11:20, according to physicians.

Threatened with her own life by her husband just a few minutes before, according to her story to the police, Mrs. Daley snapped up the .38 caliber revolver and fired the fatal shot at the challenge of her husband, who had defied her to "shoot if she dared."

The bullet struck Daley in the abdomen, penetrated his liver and lodged underneath his right shoulder blade, physicians said after an examination.

He Comes Home Drunk

While Mrs. Daley was unable to describe details which led up to the shooting Wednesday night, she told police that the act followed an orgy of continual trouble and argument throughout the evening. She charged that her husband came home from downtown early in the evening intoxicated, that he had continued to abuse her and once she was frightened from the room when her husband drew the revolver and threatened to shoot her.

First intimation of trouble came to the police in a telephone message from Mrs. Daley herself about 9:50, when she asked assistance of the police and told them that her husband "was crazy." It developed when the police arrived that Daley had already been fatally wounded and the police found three physicians, Drs. Hansen, McGarry and Armstrong, there attending the patient. The ambulance arrived shortly thereafter and Daley was rushed to the hospital. Mrs. Daley was taken to the county jail.

Continual Abuse

A Tribune reporter was refused an interview with Mrs. Daley Thursday morning, but on Wednesday night she said her husband had been down town during the afternoon, coming home early in the evening intoxicated. All through the evening, she said, Daley continued to abuse her. Shortly before the shooting they were in their bed-room and when she reached to turn on the light, he jumped at her and broke the light globe, she said. Then he went to the head of the bed and pulling the revolver from underneath his pillow, leveled the weapon at her and she fled from the room screaming.

Mrs. Daley said she returned to the room again shortly after and saw her husband again the revolver on the bed, and with an oath, challenged her to "shoot him if she dared." Presently hysterical, Mrs. Daley retrieved the revolver from the dresser, aimed at her husband lying on the bed, and accidentally fired it, according to her story.

She Calls Police

Mrs. Daley made no attempt to escape the scene, but called the police of her own will.

Two years ago, Mrs. Daley's car ran down and killed Joseph C. Urban, near Eighteenth and Jackson streets, while the latter was enroute to work in the morning on his bicycle. At the time, Mrs. Daley was returning from one of the downtown railroad stations where she had gone to meet her brother-in-law. Urban lived at 1234 South Nineteenth street.

Jack Daley was a well known light-weight pugilist, being among the top-notchers about 20 years ago when he met many big boxers in his class. He appeared in many fights in New York and Philadelphia, once going on with Joe Gans. He also fought many of the near-champions, who were numerous at that time.

Daley Found on Floor

Dr. Matt McGarry, who was the first doctor summoned to Cliffwood Inn, found Mr. Daley lying on the floor with Mrs. Daley bending over him, crying. He found the bullet had entered

FRENCH FEAR OF GERMANY BLOCKS PEACE IN EUROPE

Paris Affrighted by Threat of Strong, Reconstructed
Teuton Foe

By WILLIAM PHILIP SIMMS
Special Cable to NEA Service and
Tribune and Leader Press.

PARIS, April 19.—The one big stumbling block in the way of peace in the Ruhr—and in Europe—is France's fear of a reconstructed Germany, again powerful and capable of annihilating France if left to face her alone.

President Wilson saw this when he agreed with Britain to stand by France in the event of unprovoked aggression on the part of Germany. Nothing short of some kind of guarantee against such a fate will ever induce France from striking the Rhine.

If Great Britain will not give it to her, nor America, nor the two together, then France will follow out a policy of her own—a policy of "Laissez Passer" from which nothing short of superior force can turn her.

Washington Busy

I have means of knowing the government at Washington as well as that at London constantly is putting our leaders both in Paris and Berlin. Berlin, I know, is anxious to reach a settlement. And so is Paris. The high is not over the actual question of reparations for President Wilson is still waiting to accept $20,000,000,000 gold marks in addition to what Germany has already paid on account.

The problem which the United States and Britain have to solve, if they are to act as arbiters in the Ruhr dispute, is how France may be secured against another German invasion.

Whatever objections Premier Poincaré may have to Secretary Hughes' plan to have a commission of experts ascertain how much Germany can pay are not because he fears they would fix upon a too small sum but because the plan does not take into consideration France's national security.

One Solution

A combination of the Hughes plan to determine the question of reparations, and Lord Robert Cecil's suggestion that the League of Nations work out a scheme which would satisfy France's anxiety for her own safety is not an impossibility.

But one thing is certain, France, left by her two strongest allies—America and Britain—to face Germany alone, has ceased to strike the Rhine.

She is in the Ruhr, Germany's one big industrial center, without which Germany would find it very difficult to wage a successful war.

And there France will stay until either she can get the life insurance she is after or until she hammers out a guarantee for herself and in her own way, let any one object who may.

Napoleon always made his generals stand in his military camp, and how long they were with him.

EARLY SOLUTION—OR WAR!

Future of Ruhr Tangle, German Steel Head Tells Tribune Correspondent.

By WILLIAM PHILIP SIMMS
Special Cable to NEA Service and
La Crosse Tribune.

HAMBORN, Ruhr.—Early settlement of the Ruhr question and reparations—or war.

That is the view of Fritz Thyssen, son of Germany's Carnegie, in active control over the enormous Thyssen works which employ 70,000 hands.

To get to Fritz Thyssen to interview him was no easy task. Not that young Thyssen is inaccessible, but the sheer physical obstacles in the way were numerous. First I had to find an automobile to take me from Düsseldorf to Hamborn, a distance of about 25 miles. No trains were running. The German trainmen had struck and the French had not yet got the roads working.

French Helped

This difficulty overcome—and autos for hire are scarce, many having been requisitioned by the French—my next move was to obtain a "Laissez Passer" from the army of occupation. This was readily granted, for the French are not trying to keep newspaper correspondents cooped up and hand-fed as has been reported. They are perfectly free to go and come as they please once the proper papers are obtained.

I found Thyssen in his office at the works here—an attractive, though somewhat somber office with a 12-foot wall-mounted of heavy black oak. Over the massive table in the center of the room a huge chandelier of wrought-iron hung, draped to throw light on the table, only leaving the rest of the room in shadow. The stained glass windows contained like figures of L-boats, huge howitzers, flying war planes soaring, and such like.

Preaching Quiet

Thyssen is of the Schwab type, somewhat heavy and inclined to smile rather bitter smiles almost constantly.

"We are accused," he told me, "of trying to stir up trouble against the French in the Ruhr. The contrary is true. Every industrialist in the occupied area is preaching calm. Were it not so, there is no telling what might happen. Chancellor Cuno himself came here from Berlin to plead with the leaders to keep their mouth quiet—that that was the way to help the government. He did not come, as was said, to preach resistance."

"How much longer we can hold the people down I do not know. They are getting bitterer daily. And they are still at work. When we are forced to shut down—we can't keep piling up stock which we are unable to ship past the French customs barrier—and throw scores of thousands of workers into the streets, jobless, there is almost sure to be trouble. Empty stomachs are dangerous.

"I hope things are settled before that time comes. For an outbreak in the Ruhr might easily be accompanied by a spontaneous outbreak all over Germany which in turn might precipitate grave events throughout Europe if not the world. For there is no country in Europe today but which is in the throes of terrific unrest."

America—Last Hope

"I hope America can initiate something. England is afraid France may become the steel boss of Europe. With Ruhr coke and French ore, France would have a 30,000,000-ton output annually against England's 10,000,000 tons. England knows that and is alarmed."

"America is more disinterested and in a better position to intervene. I should like to see President Harding call another conference, similar to the last Washington conference and do for this part of the world what was done for the Pacific and far east. The world, including the United States, can never get back to normal until real peace comes to Europe."

"The alternative, if we just let things go on, is brim full of menace. The future is dark indeed, unless we get help from the outside. And America, or America and Britain together, is pretty nearly the world's last hope."

ASKS LA FOLLETTE TO INTRODUCE WET BILL IN CONGRESS

MADISON, Wis.—United States Senator Robert M. La Follette would be asked to introduce in the next congress such legislation "as will permit" the manufacture and sale of beer as a beverage under a joint resolution introduced in the assembly today by Assemblyman Prescott of Milwaukee.

The resolution sets out that "thousands of people in Wisconsin have been led to believe that the attitude of Senator La Follette toward the eighteenth amendment is liberal and because of that belief voted for him at the last election."

IT'S MORE

watched

Every time you open your lips to speak, people can judge whether or not you are really fastidious—or personally careless.

TRY this little experiment today. Notice among the people you meet how you unconsciously and instinctively watch their teeth when they're talking. You've done it all your life because it's a matter of simplest psychology for the eye to seek the source of a sound.

In the same way your own teeth are under scrutiny every time you open your lips to speak. And if the teeth are not right—if they are dull, stained and bear the marks of toothbrush or dentist's neglect, they immediately become a liability.

To some people who are more sensitive about things like this, unclean teeth are even revolting. This may never have occurred to you before.

Only the right dentifrice—consistently used—will protect you against such criticism. Listerine Tooth Paste cleans teeth a new way. The first tube you buy (25 cents) or the free sample (see coupon) will prove this to you.

You will notice the improvement even in the first few days. And, moreover, just as Listerine is the safe antiseptic, so Listerine Tooth Paste is the safe dentifrice. It cleans yet it cannot injure the enamel.

What are your teeth saying about you today?

WHO IS GOD?

What is God like? One who pardons iniquity, and passes by the transgression of the remnant of His heritage. Malachi 1:2.

Case in Point

ONE of the chief items in the recommendations submitted by Mr. Hoover's committee investigating unemployment was for a wider system of business statistics which would enable industry more accurately to gauge conditions and prepare to meet them. This, it was held, would help to prevent not only the speculation characteristic of boom times, but also to cushion the shock of the depression which follows the boom.

A concrete instance illustrating how such an increase in available business statistics would serve industry may be found in a recent complaint of cement manufacturers to Hoover that customers are again "pyramiding" orders—placing duplicate orders for their needs with several concerns in order to make sure of getting their requirements. One recalls that this was one of the prominent characteristics of the war and post-war boom in many lines. Buyers, fearing shortages, ordered recklessly beyond their needs in the belief that only part of their orders would be filled. Thus there was created a fictitious demand which led many industries far beyond legitimate needs.

When deliveries caught up with this illusory demand, the crash came. Buyers cancelled their duplicate orders in droves, manufacturers who had pushed production to take care of orders on their books found themselves "loaded" with unsaleable goods, and the whole house of cards went down in a few months.

It is obvious that were cement manufacturers, for instance, able to obtain reliable figures as to the actual consumption current and in prospect, they could avoid over-production and consequent smash later, at least to a great extent. A similar service in all lines of industry would be a guide and insurance that would be enormously useful in smoothing out the peaks and depressions of prosperity.

Mr. Hoover's committee, while its report was unspectacular and unsatisfying to many who hoped for more radical suggestions, in this instance at least put its finger on a very vulnerable spot of our present business system. It may be hoped that before the present revival goes on to the proportions of a boom, with wild speculation and general over-optimism presaging another crash, the machinery of statistics which the report recommends will have been installed. If it alone cannot stabilize and regulate the nation's industry, at least it will afford a gauge and governor by which cautious and conservative business may carry such sail as will weather the storm and keep its payroll largely intact.

President Emeritus

CONTEMPLATING the relentless progress of events looking to the not distant retirement of Professor E. A. Birge as president of the University of Wisconsin, it is natural for one to turn to the question of President Birge's future. How shall we continue to profit by his keen intelligence, this high sense of ethics and of morals, and particularly by these profound scientific attainments?

We shall borrow no worries about the new president. We credit those upon whom will fall the duty of selection with an appreciation of the importance of education, and of the leadership provided by the university as its citadel and the source of its pioneers, that will impel them to a discriminating choice.

But of President Birge's future we are not so sure. His value might be lost to view in the moment of change. Upon that value we place an estimate that is high indeed. More and more he has grown upon the thinking people of the state as an administrative official of the highest type. Coming unexpectedly to the task, he was compelled to neglect scientific work the importance of which to future generations may well transcend that of any chief executive of the university. In that moment he must have been embarrassed by the uncertainty that was thrown about his new employment. That despite such conditions he quickly became a master mind in his new field credits him with an achievement that in any case would have been extraordinary. In this he had the advantage of a background, if memory serves, of upwards of 40 years of intimate relations with the university, and of thorough knowledge of the state, experiences which have added tremendously to his efficiency. The state can not afford to lose these qualities and attainments. The university needs them. Civilization needs them.

We may be forgiven for the personal observation that President Birge is in prime physical condition and is enjoying the keenest years of his intellectual strength. He has before him unfinished researches of the highest value to science. From one who has served the university faithfully and with distinction for many years there comes to us a suggestion the merit of which few will doubt. It is that if university administration is soon to pass into other hands, President Birge be made president emeritus of the university and that, though it strain the definition, he be invited to return to his scientific investigations with ample finances and facilities.

Wisconsin, we believe, could not do less were it actuated purely by selfish motives. On the personal side it can not afford to do less than this in recognition of the spiritual worth and the substantial achievements of one to whom it owes fair consideration for distinguished services.

Insulting God

PROBABLY the Russian soviet government has been guilty of a million crimes as brutal as the execution of Mgr. Budkevich. Killing in the mass attracts less attention than the slaying of a single individual of distinction. But the case of Mgr. Budkevich in every particular typifies the plunge back toward the dark ages which Russia has taken. To it the cloth meant nothing, nor the protests of a shocked civilization. The priest was taken into a cellar and shot through the back of his head with a pistol. Sounds like "Gyp, the Blood," of East Side New York gunman fame. Perhaps, for Trotsky once lived on the East Side. Here was no national emergency, no peril that a government dare not face. Here was the piety and faith and sense of duty of a holy man made the target of a dastard trigger. It is the newest evidence to support the thought that has lurked in the minds of the world's statesmen—that this snake-bred rule must go or society pay the price of its own omnipotence.

Next is the case of Rev. Dr. Tikhon, a priest who resisted the seizure of church treasure for the bolshevik uses. America, it is said, has offered him asylum. But no! The "church" of Russia, which the agnostic Lenin permitted to be set up to appease the peasantry, finds a way to the slaughter. It will unfrock Dr. Tikhon at an ecclesiastical trial. Then the state can prosecute him as a layman, without offending religious sentiment.

Can either church or state in Russia sink lower!

Girls--Five Minutes

By JANE OSBORN

Jim Fuller and his roommate, George Blaize, were eating in accustomed silence at the corner restaurant, frequented by students—that is, students who, like Jim and George, were definitely trying to acquire a certain degree or a certain quota of knowledge in the least possible time and with the least expense of money. Jim Fuller was adding a year of contract law to his previous equipment as a civil engineer, and George—but that doesn't matter now.

Usually they ate in silence because each found it an advantage to read a daily paper, and dinner and breakfast time seemed the most convenient time to do it.

As they waited for their prune pudding with lemon sauce—the order for the day—Jim regarded intently the paper folded at the right of his place.

"I'm blessed," he commented, and to emphasize his blessedness took a penknife from his pocket opened it quickly and made a clipping from his paper. The pudding was not immediately forthcoming, so Jim took a pocket pencil and with it began figuring on the margin of the paper.

"Five minutes a day—thirty-five minutes a week—or seventeen and a half minutes twice a week. Shucks I don't believe it."

George peered inquisitively toward the clipping to see the cause of Jim's incredulity and Jim handed it to him.

"It's the result of statistics taken to find out how average college students spend their time. Four hours for actual study, eight and a half for sleep, conversation an hour and a half a day, and girls—five minutes."

"I don't spend an average of five minutes a day on girls," boasted George.

"Not now, maybe," conceded Jim. "But there have been times when you've spent a lot more, and the time will doubtless come again."

"There may be lots of men who don't spend any time on girls—and they'd make up for a lot who spent more time."

"Still," mused Jim, and then paused, but said no more.

George continued, looking at the clipping. "Here's an average of twenty minutes a day for card playing, attending games half an hour, movies an hour and a half, athletics, not compulsory, three-quarters of an hour, if you took your girl to the movies, played cards with her, took her to games or played tennis and golf with her, you wouldn't count that as time spent on girls, would you?"

"No," smiled Jim, looking rather foolish. "But Jane can't endure cards, her father won't let her go to the games or the movies with students and I can't afford to play golf or tennis. So there you are. I've been calling at her house twice or three evenings a week and there seems to be no objection. I stay sometimes two hours—suppose my average is five hours a week spent with Jane not counting semi-occasional calls on other girls. Makes me look like a ladies' man, George, which is the last thing in the world I'd want to be."

"Better cut down your calls," pronounced George. "Seventeen and a half minutes twice a week is quite enough."

George regarded the matter as a joke but Jim's thoughts kept going back to the little clipping. He was quite sure that the students who had given the estimate of their time spent with girls and minimized the matter, and still he had jokingly accused himself of extravagance.

Jim's father was a professor in engineering—one of the professors with whom Jim had come most in contact during his engineering course. Jane was just past twenty, older now than the average undergraduate students, and the decision that she should not be seen attending college games and neighborhood moving picture places was made because Jane really did not want to gain the reputation of being a college widow. At first undergraduates, meeting her at college teas and other entertainments with her father would call and then put the inevitable request that she go to games, college dances or the movies.

But when it became known that she had definite rules against it, the invitations came to more. Of all her callers Jim was, if not the most persistent, at least the one who seemed always to have the warmest welcome both from Jane and her father.

Two days later when Jim went to call at the Judsons' he arrived as usual a little after 8. At 8:30 he began making excuses for an early departure and before 8:45 he had left.

"Of course, he left early because he had another engagement," Jane told her father, "but I don't see why he didn't come out frankly and tell me so."

Once more that week Jim called. On that occasion he did not arrive until 9 and he left at 9:30. Jane was unacceptably cool when he rose to depart so soon. At the close of the next hurried call Jane looked frankly at her father.

"You usually call Sunday evenings," said she. "I'm sorry, but my father and I have plans for that evening—callers who feel it is worth while to give up an entire evening to our society. Apparently you do not."

"But Jane," protested Jim, putting his hand in his waistcoat pocket trying to find the clipping that would explain matters.

"Don't explain," said Jane. "I won't keep you, since you must be going. Good night, Jim." And with that she sailed from the room, leaving Jim to make his own way down the hall to the front door.

A week later Jim came. His call could be longer, he had told himself, because he had not been allowed to come Sunday. He found Jane alone in the apartment, her father having gone to play cards with a professor friend of his.

He had his hand on the clipping as soon as he had made his greetings, and with the aid of it, and his own explanations Jane was inclined to forgive him for what had seemed the rudeness of his short calls.

"You see, I didn't want to make a lady's man of myself, knew you wouldn't want me to. That clipping made me begin to think that maybe I'd been spending too much time, just calling."

"And of course, you had to save some of your quota of time for the other girls," suggested Jane.

"There are no other girls," assured Jim, taking her hand, which drew away and then lay passive in his. In fact, it was so passive and unresisting that Jim raised it to his lips and kissed it.

"Of course if you would play cards with me or go to college games or even the movies, then, according to that tabulation, we'd have lots more time to spend together."

Jane sat on the divan before the open fire and Jim took his place beside her.

"I don't want you to misunderstand about that rule of father's," said Jane, rather nervously. "You see, I went with the college boys for four years and nothing came of it. If I go on as of course, I might, it would look as if I was just a college widow, amusing myself with them. And so father says that he'd rather not have me seen out with any man—that is, of course, unless I am engaged to him." Jane was blushing a little, but she went on. "Then, of course, it wouldn't matter if people did notice and begin to talk."

Jim did some rather rapid thinking. "Unless you were engaged to him, Jane," he said awkwardly. "but let's change the subject." Of course she really didn't want to in the least.

"If you should," Jim began, and paused, then with difficulty resumed, "become engaged to me—then you'd be willing to go to games and movies and things?"

Jane nodded and looked away. "I never thought of it in that way," said Jim, then took Jane, unresisting, into his arms and wondered why he had been so bashful before.

"U" DORMITORIES MAY BE BUILT BY PRIVATE CAPITAL

Measure Authorizing this Action
Being Prepared for Introduction in Legislature

MADISON, Wis.—By The Associated Press.—Construction of dormitories at the University of Wisconsin through the use of private capital is to be provided for in a bill now being drafted for introduction into the legislature. The measure is authoritatively reported to call for an initial outlay of $500,000 to build one dormitory to house 500 students.

A committee of the university board of regents, meeting with Attorney General E. H. Clegg and representatives of the Finance committee, are framing the bill to conform to provisions of an opinion written by former Deputy Attorney General Ralph M. Hart. It is said to be their plan to organize a non-stock corporation which will lease land from the university and construct the first dormitory.

According to those who have considered the plan, to be proposed, the university will propose to the legislature that it be given authority to go ahead with the construction of the first dormitory when it has a fund of $200,000 to put into bonds of the corporation. This first investment would be made from funds accumulated out of earnings of the university revolving fund.

The additional $300,000 of bonds would then be held by private parties, subject to call any time that the university was ready to retire the outstanding obligations. Rent from the dormitories would be used to meet interest payments and to retire the bonds.

Through this plan, the university is reported to plan the commencement of a plan of dormitory extension for both men and women. After the first building had been constructed and paid for, the next would be started under the plan which is described as "progressive" in its operation.

It is the plan of those sponsoring the proposed dormitory program to have the finance committee introduce their bill which they would be justified for hearing and discussion before going before the houses for action.

Make THE Backyard Pay

HOW TO GROW ROOT CROPS—THE VEGETABLES
FOR HEALTH AND ENERGY

By W. R. Beattie, United States Department of Agriculture.

Children are told to eat carrots if they want color in their cheeks and roots to be strong and able to run and play. Just how much there is to this is hard to say, but all the root crops are rich in vitamins, and the elements that aid digestion. Carrots are rich in the coloring matter known as "carotin" which is also present in green grass and gives the rich color to the cow's milk during the early summer. Radishes are effective for warding off scurvy and similar disorders and are eaten more as a salad than a true vegetable.

Root crops such as carrots, beets, parsnips and salsify yield large quantities of actual food from a small space of ground and for this reason are adapted for growing in the small garden. Parsnips may be grown as early as spring crop in the south and before the extremely hot weather of summer. In the north parsnips require the entire growing season for their development and may be left in the ground during the winter and to a certain degree improve with freezing.

The essentials for growing root crops are a deep, rich, well-drained soil, good seed, proper thinning and frequent shallow cultivation. None of the root crops, with the possible exception of beets, can be transplanted successfully as the breaking causes them to grow rough and distorted. The proper method is to sow and pulverize the soil 8 to 10 inches deep, working fine fertilizer to the full depth of sowing, then sow the seeds where they are to grow and thin out the plants so that every plant left has room to develop. In the case of beets, what appears to be a seed is really a seed "ball" containing one to three seeds, consequently beets usually come in much thicker than the gardener expects. Carrot and parsnip seeds lose their vitality or power to grow very quickly and seed of last year's production should always be used.

When it comes to planting the beets, carrots and other root crops the soil which has been spaded and for-tilized should be raked smooth and the little rows or furrows formed by means of the hoe handle or a rounded stick drawn along a light line. The distance between rows may be about 18 inches for beets and carrots and at least 24 inches for parsnips and salsify. The seeds should not be covered more than 1 inch deep on sandy land and less on heavy soils, and the soil used for covering them should always be fine and mellow. If the soil is in the least dry it should be firmed over the seeds by laying a board on top of the row after the seeds are covered, then walking on the board.

Thinning the plants is the important part in growing all root crops. Carrots should be thinned twice, the first time to about one and one-half inches and later when the roots are Parsnips and salsify should be thinned to an even stand of three to four inches at one thinning. After thinning, the soil should be drawn around the remaining plants. Frequent shallow cultivation and irrigation during extremely dry weather are essential to the quick growth of all the root crops.

FORMER PRISONER TELLS OF WHIPPING BY CONVICT BOSS

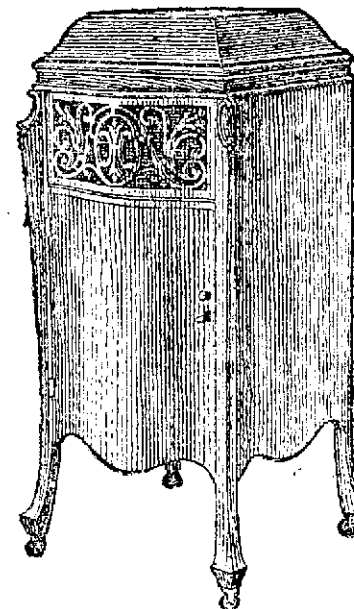

TALLAHASSEE, Fla.—By The Associated Press.—How it felt to be lashed by a convict whipping boss was related Wednesday to the joint legislative committee investigating reported brutalities in Florida convict camps by John Gardner, 35, who said he resided in Alhambra, Pa., prior to enlisting in the United States army. Gardner declared he was whipped three times without cause within a week; that he received approximately fifty licks each time and Hiram, then was the whipping boss. Gardner said the whipping drove blood and that he was unable to be on his back for a month. He also told of two other whippings he received and declared that Hiramboham said he would kill him the next time. The witness said he saw ten or twelve whippings a day in the camp. He told of a flogging given Tabert four days before the latter's death. Witnesses will be summoned from several states and include Mrs. Tabert, mother of the dead boy and a brother.

SENATE FACING BIG PROGRAM OF BUSINESS TODAY

Extended Night Session to Dispose of Calendar is Expected
by Members

MADISON, Wis.—By The Associated Press. Lippert, legislative director, today announced that the session of the Wisconsin senate Thursday will be devoted to the consideration of the calendar of bills. The session will be extended to a late hour, and the senate will be expected to pass a large number of bills.

Six bills referring to prohibition, providing for everything from repeal of the Prohibition law and for the requested repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment to the federal constitution, two measures to make enforcement more stringent, are on the calendar. Both veto and veto express the opinion that all of these measures will be killed.

Three eight hour day bills are on the calendar. The Tucker bill providing for a compulsory eight hour day in industry is the first measure up for consideration. Two substitute amendments are pending, one by Senator Gertzelman extending the scope of the Tucker bill to all workers on the farm and city, and the other by Senator Gertzelman, making overtime optional. Even the friends of this measure say that its passage is extremely doubtful.

The Olsen bill establishing an eight hour day for women employees is likewise on the calendar for consideration. The third bill by Assemblyman Killian extends the scope of the women's hours of labor law to hotel workers.

The higher amendment to the national guard appropriation bill, adopted Tuesday, by which the guard appropriation is cut to $200,000 will be up for reconsideration. The appropriation is to be placed for final passage.

University control will be the object of attack on the Prohibition bill, increasing the size of the university police, when this proposal comes up for final passage sometime during the day of evening. Another measure affecting the university is the Miller bill doing away with land closing demonstrations. The measure is on the senate calendar.

EXPLOSION RUINS TAILOR SHOP IN CALEDONIA, MINN.

CALEDONIA, Minn.—Fire resulting from an explosion destroyed the dry cleaning and tailoring establishment and home of J. W. Eden at Caledonia. The loss was estimated at between $7,000 and $8,000.

Vernice Eden, a son, was thrown across the room by the force of the blast. Joseph Eden, another son, who was engaged in tailoring work on a balcony, was thrown against the roof. Neither was hurt.

The fire department was called immediately, but in a few minutes the building was a mass of flames and attempts to save it were futile. Part of the stock in the store, valued at $1,100 was saved. The furniture and household goods on the second floor, valued between $1,500 and $2,000, were completely destroyed. The building was valued at about $6,000.

FANS WAITING TO SEE HOW LONG CLUBS WILL KEEP UP 1000 PER CENT IN STANDING

CHICAGO, Ill.—By The Associated Press. The 1923 major league baseball season, two days old in the National League and just half of that in the American, finds fans waiting to see how long some of the clubs will keep their 1,000 percent edge in "How They Stand."

Each team having played only one game in the American, four of the teams are spotless this morning—New York, Detroit, Philadelphia and Cleveland. Only two in the National, New York and Brooklyn, are unmarred the Giants standing out alone as first as they won their two games and the Robins only one, tying the other.

Of the opening games the one that attracted the most Yankee stadium was the most conspicuous, not because of the quality of the game, but because of the fact that Babe Ruth, who had been out of the game for a long time, pitched a "blatant home run" to the Yankees, easily over the Boston Red Sox, 1 to 0, three runs being scored by the home team.

Though in hot water several times last night, the Yankees' pitcher, Babe Ruth, pitched the game for the Yankees, 1 to 0, three runs being scored by the home team.

Brooklyn gained its first victory of the season over Philadelphia, 6 to 5, the Robins scoring five runs in the fourth after the Quakers had the game on fire.

Games of the Athletics and Hellmann of the Tigers crashed out circuit drives.

After extending their opening games Pittsburgh and Cincinnati, played by the experts as the Giants' most formidable rivals, both lost Wednesday, the Pirates to Chicago, 7 to 2, and the Reds to St. Louis, another early favorite, 4 to 2.

By the Associated Press. Fighting, smiling, gray-haired old "Lone Star" Hans, Indian fighter, frontier scout and the last of the real two-gun "terrace-arm" experts, met death here last night with his "boots on" as he had often desired.

But death did not come to him on the field of battle where he had so often faced it, nor on the wings of a bullet. He was crushed to death in an elevator shaft at the Omaha World-Build plant where he was night watchman.

Wins Unequal Fights

Lone Star broke into fame first in 1876 in the "Hole in Wall" country, Powder river, Wyoming, when single-handed, he shot and killed "Shack-nasty" Jim and his two fellow bandits.

It was Lone Star's hammer-fighting that won the unequal fight. The Indians dubbed him "We-Chach-Po-Wan-Go-Lan," which translated means Lone Star.

Other high spots in Hans' life were:

Shot and killed two stage coach bandits, April 12, 1877, near Valentine, Neb.

Shot five Indians in battle of Little Missouri, near Black Hills, August 2, 1877, saving the lives of a party of twenty prospectors.

Killed George Daniels with twelve shots, using both guns, hammer-fighting, in the battle of Wounded Knee, S. D., 1876.

Killed Randall Alnoworth, Nebraska, in 1878.

Shot and killed bandit at Fremont, Neb., in 1879.

Probed Custer Massacre

Was official war department investigator of Custer massacre and followed him on both sides over the battlefield, in 1876, and he has been to return to the reservation.

Was present at Sitting Bull's death.

Was chief scout master for General Sheridan for six years.

Was chief special agent of the North-western railroad for years.

"I was never beaten on the draw," he often declared.

Wore Sculp Lock

Until a month ago, Hans wore a sculp lock, eighteen inches long, which he kept coiled under a skull-cap as he sat around in the Herald editorial rooms at night, often displaying his skill with his two guns to reporters.

"No one is after it now," he explained when he ordered his lock cut off.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—James J. Larkin, the Irish agitator, who was pardoned several months ago by Governor Smith of New York, after serving two of a five year sentence, on a criminal anarchy charge, was ordered deported by the labor department.

GOVERNOR VETOES BILL PROHIBITING HIGH SCHOOL FRATS

Declares School Authorities
Have Power to Suppress Secret Societies

MADISON, Wis.—Governor John J. Blaine Thursday vetoed the Lange bill prohibiting fraternities and other secret societies in high schools and elementary schools of the state.

The reason for the veto is given by Governor Blaine as a lack of need of such a measure because of power to suppress such school organizations is now held by school authorities.

The statute gives the school board power to make all needed rules and regulations for the organization, graduation and government of the school, and power to suspend any pupil from the privileges of the school for non-compliance with the rules established by them or by the teacher with their consent. Governor Blaine quoted from a ruling by the supreme court to uphold his contention that additional legislation is not needed to control school fraternities.

"The courts have frequently held that they will not interfere with the governing of a school in its enforcement of all lawful and reasonable rules for the conduct of the school."

The proposed bill does not confer explicit authority either upon the teacher or the governing board of the school to expel a pupil, but it must be assumed that a power is intended to be conferred upon either the teacher or the school board.

The power to expel a pupil for belonging to any fraternity or secret organization, if such fraternity or secret organization in any manner operates against the good government of the school, is beyond question in the school boards and teachers.

"One test to be applied to legislation is, is there any necessity for the proposed legislation? If not, then there is no reason for its enactment. Applying this test clearly this bill ought not to become a law, as the power it confers is now possessed by school authorities."

If the government is to be charged with the duty of attending to everything, it must, of course, also be held responsible for everything. Commanding, instructing, directing and advising in regard to everything, government will then be required to foresee everything even the fanciest of fashion, the whims of trade, the freaks of the weather, and paraphrasing an illustrious author, the government is asked to become the terrestrial providence.

Secret fraternities and secret organizations that are in any degree school organizations may constitute a vice and cause. When that vice or that cause exists, the power of the community exists to eliminate it. The responsibility rests upon the community, and under such circumstances the state should not intrude its paternalistic and supercilious power over local authority affecting purely local affairs.

Kinks-o- the Links by "PRO"

When playing out of a sand trap, the club head touches the sand on the upward swing. The player goes through with the swing and successfully gets out of the trap. In addressing the ball the sand was not touched with the club.

Is a player penalized a stroke when the club head touches the sand before coming into contact with the ball regardless of the circumstances, or is there a line of discrimination?

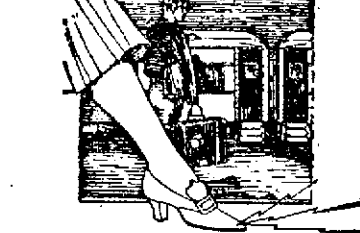

The player is penalized a stroke for touching the sand with the club head. The fact that it came on the upward swing makes no difference. The rule is very definite and no exceptions are noted. While the player was in no way aided by the act, no consideration can be given that fact. He must suffer the penalty of one stroke.

Player's drive from the tee results in a slice that strikes a spectator standing well off the fairway. After striking one of the gallery the ball is deflected into a very bad lie. Has the player any recourse?

Such a happening is merely regarded as a break of the game. The ball must be played from the resulting lie.

Walter Johnson Loses Opener to Athletics, 3 to 1

NEW YORK, April 18.—A record throng of 74,000 fans witnessed the New York Yankees' American League opener against the Boston Red Sox at Yankee stadium last night. Babe Ruth, in his first home run drive, hit four home runs and scored two runs, leading the Yankees to a 2-1 victory.

Walter Johnson, who pitched for the Yankees, lost his opener to the Athletics, 3 to 1. Johnson pitched a complete game, but was unable to keep the Athletics out of the lead.

The Athletics, managed by Connie Mack, scored three runs in the first inning. The Yankees, managed by Ed Barrow, scored two runs in the first inning.

Scott Turns in Good Pitching Exhibition and Gets Home Run; Score 7 to 4

BOSTON, Mass.—Long hits off Watson and Oeschger enabled the world champion Giants to beat Boston, 7 to 4, on Wednesday. Barnes hit the left field wall on the fly, getting only a double for this unpedigreed feat.

NORMAL GYM TEAM RANKS EIGHTH AT NORTHWEST MEET

Complex System of Ranking Puzzles Athletes; Individuals Win Honors

The final results of the Northwest gym meet received by Coach Reuter late Wednesday afternoon showed that La Crosse finished in eighth place, in a field of twelve.

This final ranking was taken of all the classes together, A, B, and C. In the individual classes, The St. Paul Turnverein won first place, with the University of Minnesota second.

In Class "B" the St. Paul won the cup. The markings of the meet are in such a complex form that nobody can make them out, except Coach Reuter, who has considerable experience in this line of work.

The members of the gym team are still wanting to know just where they stand. No second place was given in class "B" but the general consensus of opinion is that La Crosse took that place.

However, in the single marks several of the Normal men did good work. Severson placed third in single events on the side horse in Class "B", while Wangman won tenth place in the all-around events in class "B" with a total of 83.9 points.

Severson, Follows, Wangman have been asked to write up their exercises on special pieces, which is considered a big honor. These exercises are all optional and done on certain pieces of apparatus.

All in all it has been a successful year for the La Crosse gym team, considering it was the first one organized since Coach Reuter has been here. In winning the one dual meet and placing eighth in the Northwest meet it must be stated that the team is something to be proud of and in another year great things and better can be looked for from Coach Reuter and his men.

MONTAGUES START WARMING UP FOR THE OPENING GAME

Work Out at Normal Field Tuesday Evening and Plan Practice Again Tonight

Several members of the Montague baseball club have started spring training looking to their opening game with the La Crosse Nelsons at Copeland park May 6.

Team members of the club who are in the city limbered up a little at Normal field Tuesday evening and will be out again tonight. Frank Bedesom, business manager, has no new announcement to make regarding the line-up, indicating that things will shape themselves into a team shortly.

The Angel Brothers are in town and are working out with the team, along with Franzl, Johnny Weigant, Jack Johnson, Collins and Fitzke. Art Mills is also working out with the club. The Montagues have Gieske, of Winona, who is undoubtedly getting himself in condition in the no-river city.

"Sey" McCauley will be in condition to start with the locals in their first game. He is Captain and is doing the hurling for Columbia college at Duquesne, where he is a student.

WETS IN SENATE SPLIT OVER BILL FOR BEER RETURN

Difference of Opinion on Schumann Resolution Appears at Committee Hearing

MADISON, Wis.—By The Associated Press.—A split in the wet forces of the senate was brought out during the hearing on the Schumann joint resolution before the state affairs committee of the senate Wednesday afternoon.

Senator Schumann, Watertown, advocated and Senator Gettelman, Milwaukee, opposed the resolution, which would provide for a referendum of the people of the state on the question of a return of beer and light wines. Both senators are listed among the wets.

A. W. Richter, Milwaukee attorney, who has advocated the anti-prohibition cause in several hearings, also opposed the resolution. Senator Schumann declared that a referendum was the only way permanently and satisfactorily to settle the liquor controversy. The Wisconsin act, which created a dissatisfied people, a distressing economic situation and a menace to public health through the moonshine traffic, he said, "The only way to settle the question raised in a democratic way is to let the people express themselves through a referendum."

Senator Gettelman and Mr. Richter denied that a referendum, even though favorable to the wets, would aid their cause. "The effect of such an election would be merely academic and would not be legally binding or morally persuasive," Mr. Richter said. "Such a resolution is highly impractical and its passage would mean nothing."

FIVE MILLION MILES COVERED BY U. S. MAIL FLYERS IN 5 YEARS

CHICAGO, Ill.—Up to the close of last year aviators of the air mail service had flown a total of 5,281,823 miles since the inauguration of the service in May, 1918, according to a report on the accomplishments of the service made public Thursday by the postoffice department. It was estimated that the service is now operating on a schedule of two million miles a year.

The report showed that on more than one-third of the 14,764 trips made the pilots had to wing their way through rain, snow, hail, or fog. The increasing dependability of the service was said to have been shown in the decrease in the number of forced landings from 1,474 in 1921 to 573 last year. The decrease was attributed to increased skill of pilots and rigid inspection of planes.

"ROBIN HOOD"

There was a day when no self-respecting horse, permitted in a certain exclusive circle, would go prancing around in public dishevelled. That day was back in the Twelfth Century in England during the reign of King Richard I. Every charger privileged to hobnob with knights was amply provided with gorgeous raiment bearing the emblem of his knightly owner so that it might be distinguished from all others. The kind of trappings used in those romantic and thrilling times are to be seen on the horses appearing in Douglas Fairbanks' "Robin Hood," coming next Thursday to the Majestic Theater, and the effect is quite bizarre to the public of this generation, accustomed as we are to have all manner of styles of motor cars cross our daily vision.

These noble robes were noted for their ornateness and they served no useful purpose, such as protection against fumes or the natural elements. It was just plain, every-day style then among knights.

RIVIERA TODAY

Manager Cooper of the Riviera theater is to be congratulated for bringing to this city one of the best photographs projected on a local screen in some time. This picture, "While Justice Waits," in which Dustin Farnum is starred, is a William Fox production. Supported by an admirable cast headed by Irene Rich, Farnum does some of the best work of his career in this picture.

"GRUMPY"

"Grumpy," featuring Theodore Roberts, May McAvoy, and Conrad Nagel and produced by William deMille, was given its premiere at the Rivoli Theater last evening and was heartily received by the large audience.

A diamond has been the cause of many a quarrel between sweethearts, but seldom are the circumstances similar to those found in "Grumpy." Grumpy's granddaughter, Virginia (May McAvoy) is engaged to Ernest (Conrad Nagel), a special representative of a large firm of jewelers. He is robbed of a valuable gem by Chamberlain (Jarvis), who works his way into the

CASINO TODAY

Motion picture patrons who like plenty of pepper in their screen service have evidently found the red-hot fare they like in "Crashin' Through," Harry Carey's latest starring vehicle, now being shown at the Casino theater.

Although a delightful love element runs through "Crashin' Through," the producers of this film must have made up their mind to build up a western story which would top anything else in its line by at least one or two more thrills than had hitherto been incorporated in any previous story of his type.

JACKIE COOGAN

Eating spaghetti in the approved manner of the Italians is difficult enough to make even an adult, unaccustomed to the task, shudder. But when a boy of the age and size of little Jackie Coogan attempts the feat—why, it can't be done.

Jackie tries it in his latest production, "Daddy," which is now the feature at the Majestic Theater, and he convulses you with his antics. In dishing the slippery edible out of the pot on the stove Jackie finds it impossible to make it stay on the plate, so he brings a pair of scissors into play.

Simple Application That Dissolves Blackheads

No more squeezing and pinching to get rid of those unsightly, pimply, blackheads. There is one simple, safe and sure way to get them out and that is to dissolve them. Get about two ounces of calomel powder from your druggist—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub briskly over the blackheads for a few seconds—wash the parts and every blackhead will be gone. Pinching and squeezing out blackheads make large pores and cannot get all of the blackheads out this way—while this simple application of calomel powder and water dissolves every particle of them and leaves the skin and pores in their natural condition.

latest and longest feature, "Safety Last," a seven-reel farce comedy, came like a flash out of a clear sky. It so happened that at the Roslyn hotel one day, "Bill" Strother, known the world over as the "human fly," was pitting his skill against the intricacies of the Roslyn's granite walls. Immediately the idea hit Harold that it might be a good plan to make a thrill picture, and to fill it with just such daring and hilarious situations as he made in "Never Weaken" and "High and Dizzy," outstanding successes in Harold's early achievements. "Safety Last" will be seen April 28 at the Casino theater, and it is declared to be filled to the brim with thrills.

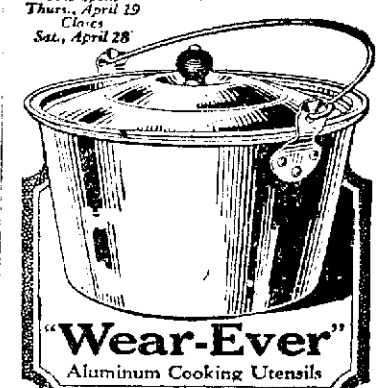

CASINO NEXT WEEK

Glady's Brockwell, one of the most popular screen stars, in "The Drug Traffic," which will be shown at the Casino all next week, portrays one of the most human roles ever brought to the stage. As Mary, a former drug addict, who has reformed and joined the Salvation Army in a determined effort to help humanity, Miss Brockwell is called upon to do unusual acting. The role of the reformed addict is one that will not pass out of memory with the last flicker of the film, for it is a character that grips the heartstrings, holding the attention of the audience undivided.

FORD'S CASH BALANCE TWO HUNDRED MILLION

No Need for Going Into Market to Borrow Money, Says Automobile Man

NEW YORK.—Henry Ford's cash balances still exceed $200,000,000 in spite of his recent numerous large purchases of coal properties, timberlands, water sites and other investments. It was declared Thursday in the Wall Street Journal, which published the Detroit capitalists' telegraphic answers to a questionnaire recently sent him by the newspaper. The manufacturer added that he had no present intention of going into market to borrow money.

Among other things, revealed by Mr. Ford was that the first step taken by him in the development of his coal distribution was the letting of contracts for doubling the River Rouge coking ovens. He said he was urging the advisability of putting in coke ovens at all his coal properties, that he may take advantage of numerous by-products of coal. He added that the installation of coke ovens at Akron, Ohio, was under consideration, with the plan of ultimately supplying the city with cheap coke and gas.
